Cover illustration: Harris & Ewing, “The Flying Senators,” November 27, 1927. Senator Frederick Hale of Maine, left, and Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut were called the “flying senators” on Capitol Hill because of their frequent use of the airplane to transact government business. This photograph was snapped at Bolling Field, Washington, DC, just before the senators took off for Langley Field, VA. Senator Bingham was an experienced pilot, having seen service with the Army Air Service during World War I.
