MARTA AVERNA holds a PhD in interior architecture and exhibition design and is an adjunct professor in the Department of Architecture and Urban Studies at the Polytechnic of Milan, where she coordinates the international section of the master’s degree in the design of architecture interiors. She is a research fellow for the National Interest Research Project (PRIN) project “Transatlantic Transfers.” Her teaching and research activities focus on the meanings and methods of interiors, the design of domestic dwellings in marginal contexts, and the reuse of monumental and diffused heritage. Her publications include Onore al lavoro: Gli interni delle fabbriche (Aracne, 2021) and The Italian Presence in Post-war America, 1949–1972, vol. 1, Architecture, Design, Fashion (Mimesis, 2023).

SIMONE CINOTTO is professor of modern history at the University of Gastronomic Sciences in Pollenzo, Italy, where he is the director of the master’s program in world food studies and the research unit coordinator of PRIN “Transatlantic Transfers: The Italian Presence in Postwar America.” He has been a visiting professor and visiting scholar at Columbia University, New York University, and Indiana University. He is the author of Gastrofascism and Empire: Food in Italian East Africa, 1935–1941 (Bloomsbury, 2024); The Italian American Table: Food, Family, and Community in New York City (University of Illinois Press, 2013); Soft Soil Black Grapes: The Birth of Italian Winemaking in California (New York University Press, 2012), and he is the editor of Food Mobilities: Making World Cuisines (University of Toronto Press, 2023); Global Jewish Foodways: A History (University of Nebraska Press, 2018); and Making Italian America: Consumer Culture and the Production of Ethnic Identities (Fordham University Press, 2014), which won the 2015 John G. Cawelti Award for the Best Textbook/Primer of the Popular Culture Association/American Culture Association. His article “Leonard Covello, the Covello Papers, and the Eating Habits of Italian Immigrants in New York” won the 2004 David Thelen Prize awarded by the Organization of American Historians for the best article on American history published in a language other than English and was published in the Journal of American History.

PAOLA CORDERA is associate professor of museology at the Polytechnic of Milan. She was Leon Levy Fellow at the Center for the History of Collecting at the Frick Art Reference Library in New York City in 2016 and a visiting scholar at the American Academy in Rome in 2023–2024. Her multidisciplinary background is in the field of museums and cultural heritage, and her research interests include art, decorative arts, and design. She takes a transdisciplinary perspective, connecting the reception of these works in collections and their (re)production and placing them within the context of the history of taste, art markets, and exhibition strategies.

GIULIA CRISANTI holds a PhD in modern history from Fordham University. She is a postdoctoral researcher at the University La Sapienza in Rome, where she works on the PRIN 2020 project “ATLAs—Atlante delle Televisioni Locali.” From June 2021 to March 2023, she worked as a research fellow at the University of Gastronomic Sciences on the project “Transatlantic Transfers: The Italian Presence in Postwar America” (PRIN 2017). She is also an adjunct lecturer in US history at the University of Pisa. Her research interests include the history of Italy-US relations and cultural exchanges, business history, and processes of Americanization and globalization with a focus on the United States and Western Europe, media history, and food history. She recently published Europeans Are Lovin’ It? Coca-Cola, McDonald’s and Responses to American Global Businesses in Italy and France, 1886–2015 (Brill, 2023), which received the Rob Kroes Publication Award. With Simone Cinotto, she edited the volume Un oceano di stile: Produzione e consumo di Made in Italy negli Stati Uniti del dopoguerra (Mimesis, 2023).
CHIARA FAGGELLA is a fashion historian based in Florence, Italy. She earned her PhD in fashion studies from Stockholm University, Sweden, and she was a visiting fellow at the European University Institute of Fiesole and a research associate at Polytechnic of Milan. Her work revolves primarily around postwar trans-European connections between Italy and other national fashion industries, with a particular focus on intermediaries like retailers, promoters, and professionals other than designers.

Cristina Iuli is associate professor of American literature at Università del Piemonte Orientale, Italy. Her essays are published in Modernism/Modernity, Arizona Quarterly, Simploke, Flusser Studies, Aut-Aut, Letterature D’America, RSA-Journal, and others. She is the author of Effetti Teorici: critica culturale e nuova storiografia letteraria Americana (Otto, 2002); Giusto il tempo di esplodere: Il romanzo pop di Nathanael West (Bergamo University Press, 2004); Spell It Modern: Modernity and the Question of Literature (Mercurio, 2009); and Nathanael West: Miss Lonelyhearts (Marsilio, 2017). She is coeditor of La letteratura degli Stati Uniti: Dal Rinascimento Americano ai nostri giorni (2017, with Paola Loreto), Trame Transatlantiche: Relazioni letterarie tra Italia e Stati Uniti, 1949–1972 (2024, with Stefano Morello), and the Journal of Modern Italian Studies special issue “Transatlantic Literary Transfers in the Second Italian Renaissance: The Circulation of Italian Culture in the US in the Postwar” (2024, with Simone Cinotto). Iuli is research unit coordinator of the National Interest Research Project “Transatlantic Transfers: The Italian Presence in Postwar America” and the editor of the book series Transatlantic Transfers at Mimesis Press. She was a Fulbright Distinguished Professor at Northwestern University in 2019.

Eugenia Paulicelli is professor of Italian, comparative literature, film studies, and women’s and gender studies at Queens College, CUNY, and the CUNY Graduate Center and the founder of the concentration in fashion studies. She is author of Fashion under Fascism: Beyond the Black Shirt (Berg 2004; expanded edition, Bloomsbury, 2024); Italian Style: Fashion and Film from Early Cinema to the Digital Age (Bloomsbury, 2016); Rosa Genoni: La moda è una cosa seria (bilingual edition, Deleyva, 2015); Film, Fashion and the 1960s (coeditor with Drake Stutesman and Louise Wallenberg, Indiana University Press, 2017); The Fabric of Cultures: Fashion, Identity, Globalization (coeditor with Hazel Clark, Routledge, 2009); The Routledge Companion to Fashion Studies (coeditor with Veronica Manlow and Elizabeth Wissinger, Routledge, 2021); and the special issue of the Journal of Italian Cinema and Media dedicated to “Film, Fashion, Costume in Italy and Beyond” (coeditor with Giulia Po Delisle, 2024). She has curated exhibitions for The Fabric of Cultures, a multimedia project she founded and for which she has also created, with Massimo Mascolo and Claudio Napoli, seven short films on the “New Made in Italy.”
Information for Contributors
Authors wishing to have a manuscript considered for publication should e-mail the following three items in Microsoft Word format as attachments to both the editor (david.aliano@mountsaintvincent.edu) and the managing editor (rosangela.briscese@qc.cuny.edu):

- A copy of the manuscript, including page headers with the author’s name throughout
- A copy of the manuscript without any identification of the author, i.e., no title page, no header, and with deletion of all first-person references to the author in the essay
- An article abstract

Articles in the IAR may include figures, such as photos, tables, or drawings, all in black and white. Figures must not be embedded in the Word files and should be submitted with the manuscript. Figures should be at least 300 dpi and in TIF or JPG format. The manuscript should contain references to the figures (e.g., “insert Figure 1 about here”), and a list of figure captions should be listed as a separate page. Discussion of the placement and inclusion will follow the article’s acceptance.

Articles should generally be no more than twenty-five pages (6,250 words) long, double-spaced, not including bibliography and endnotes. The IAR generally follows the seventeenth edition of The Chicago Manual of Style (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2010).

Article manuscripts are acknowledged on receipt and are evaluated first by the IAR editorial staff, and then, if appropriate for the IAR, unidentified manuscripts are sent to two qualified anonymous referees for review. Authors are notified as soon as a decision has been made to accept or reject a manuscript; rejection may be outright or with the possibility of revision and resubmission for a new evaluation. When a manuscript is submitted to the IAR, it should not have been published elsewhere nor be under consideration by any other journal. If an article is accepted for publication in the IAR, the author is responsible for providing the IAR staff with a clean, corrected copy of the manuscript in Word format.

Reviews are generally requested by the review editors (books: Robert Oppedisano, oppedisanorobert@gmail.com; film and digital media: Rebecca Bauman, rebecca_bauman@fitnyc.edu; exhibitions: Melissa Marinaro, memarinaro@heinzhistorycenter.org) but the editors welcome queries from scholars concerned with particular research areas, and expressions of willingness to review from scholars with particular expertise. Review copies must be mailed to the attention of the managing editor.

The journal will occasionally feature a “Notes and Documents” section for shorter works such as biographical sketches, obituaries, reproductions of historical documents, etc. These items should generally be no more than six pages (1,500 words) in length.
