RED INK

A NATIVE AMERICAN STUDENT PUBLICATION

MISSION

RED INK's primary mission is to provide an opportunity for students and nonstudents to publish their work in the areas of poetry, short stories, creative nonfiction, original artwork, book & film reviews and articles. While enhancing a student's professional development, RED INK gives contributors an opportunity to interact with other Native American researchers and writers in their respective fields. RED INK also seeks an ongoing discourse with students, professors, tribal leaders, tribal members, and all interested communities regarding current Native American issues. In an attempt to present a journal that is both challenging and accessible, this journal is interdisciplinary in focus and provides an open forum for creative expression.
