At a time when the necessity for animal experimentation has been called more and more into doubt, the Linzeys show how deep-seated research paradigms, institutional inertia, and money from the biomedical industry can persuade an esteemed university like Oxford to press on with practices that to any dispassionate observer must seem barbaric. Their analysis is backed up by an impressive set of essays by philosophers, lawyers, and scientists.

“Essential reading. A comprehensive ethical analysis of animal experiments.”

—Sir David Madden, Senior Member, St Antony’s College, Oxford
New volume in the Common Threads series:
Animal Ethics for Veterinarians

This Common Threads volume, drawn from articles originally published in the Journal of Animal Ethics (JAE), offers veterinarians and other interested readers a primer on key issues in the field. Essays in the first section discuss aspects of veterinary oaths, how advances in animal cognition science factor into current ethical debates, and the rise of complementary and alternative veterinary medicine and its relationship to traditional veterinary medicine. The second section continues with an essay that addresses why veterinarians have an obligation to educate animal caregivers to look past “cuteness” in order to treat all animals with dignity. The collection closes with three short sections focusing on animals in farming, trade, and research—areas where veterinarians encounter conflicts between their job and their duty to advocate and care for animals.
