Sally Howell is associate professor of history and director of the Center for Arab American Studies at the University of Michigan-Dearborn. Her books include Arab Detroit 9/11: Life in the Terror Decade (Wayne State University Press, 2011), Old Islam in Detroit: Rediscovering the Muslim American Past (Oxford University Press, 2014), and Hadha Baladuna: Arab American Narratives of Boundary and Belonging (Wayne State University Press, 2022). Old Islam in Detroit was named a Michigan Notable Book by the Library of Michigan and given the Evelyn Shakir Award for nonfiction by the Arab American National Museum. Howell is also a curator of the Halal Metropolis exhibition series exploring the political and cultural impact of Muslim visibility in greater Detroit. Karen Majewski received her PhD in American Culture from the University of Michigan, concentrating on the study of immigration and ethnicity. She is the former executive director of the Polish American Historical Association and has lectured and published extensively on the cultural history of Poles in the US. Her award-winning book Traitors and True Poles: Narrating a Polish American Identity, 1880–1939 was published in 2003, and her latest work has focused on women's issues in American Polonia. Her work on the University of Michigan's Chene Street History Project helped document a Detroit multiethnic, working-class neighborhood. From 2002 to 2021, Majewski concentrated on community service, serving on Hamtramck, Michigan's Historical Commission, as city council president, and for sixteen years as the city's Mayor. Anna Müller holds an MA from the University of Gdańsk, Poland, and a PhD from Indiana University. She is an associate professor and the Frank and Mary Padzieski Endowed Professor in Polish/Polish American/Eastern European Studies in the Department of Social Sciences at the University of Michigan-Dearborn. From 2010 to 2012, she worked as a curator for the Museum of the Second War in Gdańsk, Poland, where she co-curated exhibitions on the Holocaust, concentration camps, forced labor, and eugenics. She is the author of If the Walls Could Speak: Inside a Women's Prison in Communist Poland (Oxford University Press, 2018). Email: anmuller@umich.edu

Sunanda Samaddar Corrado received her PhD from Columbia University Teachers College in Comparative International Education. She is currently an adjunct professor of anthropology at Wayne State University and Wayne County Community College District. She is also cofounder and creative director of Education by DeSign, a public education research consortium committed to issues of access and equity. She is interested in the ethnographic examination of human capitals, urban policy reforms, transnational kinship networks, South Asian migrations, the family, citizenship and belonging.
