After your login is successful, you will be able to select either “current content” or “back content.”

“Current content” is on the Scholarly Publishing Collective (scholarlypublishingcollective.org/uip/pas), which holds issues of Polish American Studies from 2000 to the most current issue.

“Back content” will take you to the JSTOR site (jstor.org/journal/poliamerstud), which hosts a complete repository of PAS archives from its inception in 1944. The content will expand as the “moving wall” advances; new issues will appear three years after publication.

FOOTPRINTS OF POLONIA

Polish
Historical Sites
Across
North America

Edited by Ewa E. Barczyk

"Footprints of Polonia is an outstanding look at the way that Polish Americans have transformed America's cities, suburbs, and towns. It is an essential guide to the physical impact of one of the country's largest ethnic groups."

—Dominic A. Pacyga, author of American Warsaw: The Rise, Fall, and Rebirth of Polish Chicago

AVAILABLE FALL 2022

From majestic churches to roadside chapels, from massive statues of Revolutionary war heroes Kościuszko and Pułaski to small plaques honoring Polish workers who died striking for fair treatment, the contributions of Polish immigrants and their descendants can be found across the continent. These "footprints" of Polonia, commemorating towering events and figures from history that are a source of pride among Polish Americans, are cataloged in this unique guide.

The Polish American Historical Association (PAHA) developed this volume with the goal of highlighting key sites of Polish-interest in the U.S., Canada, and parts of Mexico and the Caribbean and the important ways in which Polish immigrants contributed to history, politics, arts, and society.

Footprints of Polonia can serve as the perfect travel companion for anyone who wants to learn about the rich history and heritage of the Polish diaspora. It is also an excellent resource for Polish language schools and Polish American organizations who want to learn more about and take pride in sites of interest in their area.
