MANUSCRIPT PREPARATION AND SUBMISSION

Original submissions should be uploaded to the Rhetoric & Public Affairs online submission portal. Manuscripts accepted for publication must be brought into conformity with The Chicago Manual of Style, following the endnote reference style. The entire manuscript should be double-spaced, using standard margins on all sides and numbering pages consecutively. Full submission instructions can be found at https://msupress.org/journals/rhetoric-and-public-affairs/

Examples

Subsequent shortened citations should be made as follows (do not use Ibid.): Campbell and Jamieson, Deeds Done in Words, 10.

ENDNOTES: Endnotes should be numbered consecutively; these numbers must correspond to those in the text. Endnote style for all manuscripts accepted for publication follows The Chicago Manual of Style.

EDITORIAL POLICY

Rhetoric & Public Affairs is an interdisciplinary journal devoted to the history, theory, and criticism of public discourse. Arenas of rhetorical investigation might include but are not limited to political campaigns for social, cultural, environmental, or economic justice; modes of resistance to those campaigns; situated instances of executive leadership; legislative and judicial deliberations; comparative rhetorics; transnational diplomacy; digital circulation and mediation of public discourse; and/or constitution of political and social identities. Critical, analytical, or interpretive essays examining symbolic influences in any historical period (including the contemporary) anywhere in the world are welcome. Of special interest are manuscripts that interrogate dynamics of power and privilege, voice and voicelessness, oppression and resistance as well as axes of identity such as race, gender, sexuality, ability, citizenship, and class, as these take form in concrete rhetorical situations. Moreover, we welcome essays that explore the nexus of rhetoric, politics, and ethics—the worlds of power, persuasion, and social values as they meet in the crucible of public deliberation, debate, and protest.
